

Don't wait for something to happen!

We are faced with troubled times. The recent string of tragic events demonstrates the need to review, or create, security measures that will give employees peace of mind. More importantly, a safer place to work.

Keep in mind that violence in the workplace can come from different directions: International or domestic terrorism, domestic violence, disgruntled current or former employees, dissatisfied customers, clients or patients. In all cases, have you prepared your staff through an effective training program?

Violence in the Workplace Preparedness Program

Designed to help keep your employees out of harm's way!

Your employees are your greatest asset. Giving them a secure work environment is not only the right thing to do, it is legally required. Are you in compliance?

“Don’t just get ready, be ready!”

Having a violence in the workplace policy is one thing. Having a comprehensive preparedness program is another. A key component to workplace safety is always being prepared so staff can always be on the ready in the event of an incident.

We train your managers, staff and front line personnel on what to do if they are confronted with circumstances involving different levels of violence in the workplace. In addition, we provide a set of procedures and protocols that can be given to new hires during their orientation. —
